About Us

INONI is a risk, resilience and business continuity software and solution provider. Our mission is to help protect organisations against the threats and hazards they face, from fires to fuel shortages, power cuts to pandemics. To do this, we offer a flexible range of professional products and services that deliver exceptional value.

Background

In 2004, John Robinson INONI's MD ran a groundbreaking benchmark survey "Creating a Resilient Culture". He was asked to present it at the BCI Finance Special Interest Group. The SIG opened with three presentations from the Bank of England, HM Treasury and the Financial Services Authority.

Each emphasised the urgent need for a resilience benchmark for the UK finance sector and so was borne the Resilience Benchmarking Project. Members of the all-bank steering committee asked if INONI was able to deliver BIA and BCP.

Where we stand

Since our first dealings with US banks in 1988, through to supporting our present-day clients, our motivation is the efficient and sustained defence of our clients.

We view software as a convenient means to this end; we look to it to automate, simplify, remove inefficiency, save time and improve reliability and consistency.

We do not foresee software 'running the show' and ultimately, even with INONI's advanced capability, we still insist that major continuity decisions remain informed but never totally driven by the tools we use.

About Us

Our Experience

INONI has been operating successfully since 2005 with many years of risk industry experience prior to that. Our customers range from small organisations to multinationals.

We have provided expertise to the finance and insurance sectors, telecommunications, the health service, policing, councils, airlines, manufacturing, retail, online gambling, call centre outsourcing and many others.

We are well-placed to securely and confidentially share our breadth of knowledge and experience with each new customer, so you benefit from all we know.

Our Products

INONI is also the name of our powerful software toolset. Designed to make life easier for end-users, it collects information via interviews that can be tailored so they use language and terms that people can easily relate to.

Our simplified but highly programmable data model means you can define information that represents your organisation and arrange it in ways that conform to your approach. In most cases we can import our clients' existing methodology. This saves time and reduces training to a bare minimum.

Our People

INONI was founded in 2005 by John Robinson, a Fellow of the BCI and recipient of its Lifetime Achievement Award, setting the standard for all our consultants.

INONI is known for progressive thinking, giving rise to inspired solutions such as the Resilience Benchmarking Project and the BCI Benchmark. We also received a commendation for 'Most Innovative Product' in Corporate Insurance and Risk Magazine's annual awards.

INONI solutions are delivered by our consulting team. Each is a recognised professional in his or her own field, and trained to deliver solutions with or without INONI software support.

Our consulting projects range from providing a few hours of expert advice or a helping hand in a complex area, through to management training, exercises and end-to-end BCM programmes. We are frequently retained and these engagements often become long-term commitments, lasting many years.

Our Commitment

We are passionate about what we do and care for every stakeholder. Our success is not accomplished alone and only through understanding each others needs can we achieve great things. By working together we will make resilience more accessible, more affordable and more worthwhile.

Most of all, we are committed to protecting our clients' business, delivering excellence through efficient, cost-effective solutions.
